Golden Rams Win First Game 12-0

The Belle Glade Rams won the opening game of the season Thursday night from St. Mary's of Miami with a score of 12-0. A large crowd witnessed the opener and was impressed with the way the new team showed up and worked together.

The first touchdown came a few minutes after the start of of the game.

Belle Glade won the kick-off and in the second play St. Mary's fumbled, the Rams taking over and made the first down and in the very next play went for a TD. The Rams failed to make the extra point. Skywatch Test Off To Hectic Start; Successful Ending

Volunteer Air Raid Spotters Keep Four-Hour Lookout From Jail Roof

"Operation Skywatch," the four-hour practice test on Monday of five ground observation posts in this area, was pronounced as "perfect in every detail" by Ellis F. Altman, county Civil Defense Director.

However, "skywatch" here at Belle Glade got started only after assorted difficulties, including combats with a ladder and battles with a mulishly obstinate telephone that went dead when airplanes hove into view. Notwithstanding these headaches, local volunteer spotters successfully reported between 80 and 100 airplanes to the Air Filter Center in Miami during the four hours of the watch on Monday.

The project to test area observation posts started at noon. At five minutes before twelve, Telephone Company crews finished installing the telephone on the roof of the City Jail, temporary observation post.

At two minutes before twelve, Clyde Clayton, Chief Observer, shinnied up the tall ladder placed in position against the south wall of the building; and with the aid of two camp chairs, a pair of sun glasses, and a Texas white sombrero, started his vigil of watching the skies for aircraft, which for the practice test were flown from Palm Beach International Airport.

Plane Spotting Initiated By "Snagging" A "Flying Saucer" At Closest Range Yet!

Cartoon by Joe "Shorty" Huggins

The above is the Herald Artist's drawing of the "saucer" as described by Mr. Fred Brown, dairyman of the Everglades Experiment Station, whose herd of milk cows was disturbed Sunday morning by some aerial machine both audible, and visible, and trailed by a penetrating odor.

WHAT IS IT?

IT HUMS — IT MOVES VERTICALLY AND HORIZONTALLY AT EASE — IT'S ROUND OR ELLIPTICAL — IT'S ORANGE COLORED WITH LIGHTED PORTS — IT'S NOT ODORLESS— IT SCARES COWS AND HORSES, AND EXCITES PEOPLE — IT CREATES CONVERSATION.

IT'S BEEN HERE — YOU NAME IT!

A mysterious flying object hovering about twenty feet over the tops of the trees, frightened milk cows at the Everglades Experiment Station so badly on Sunday morning that they stampeded twice, and when milked by Fred Brown, dairyman, the 13 cows yielded only nine gallons of milk, intsead of their usual 16.

Fred Brown, himself badly shaken by the strange occurrence ,this week described to two Air Force Intelligence officers the circumstances under which he saw the flying object. He did not call it a flying saucer, but "I don't rightly know what it was," he said.

The Air Force officers, together with the Herald reporter, visited Brown at his home in Lloyd's subdivision here Tuesday. With two blonde, curly-haired children, who played near his feet while he talked, and his wife, who held an equally curly-haired baby in her lap, Brown told the following story.

"I usually go to work about five o'clock," he said. "But this being a Sunday, I went out about half past four. When I got out to the station the cows were waiting at the barn to be milked. I was just heading them into the barn when I heard a funny noice—like a low kind of hum, or like the noise that vibrating electric wires make—and looking up, I saw a big, round thing flying about 20 or 30 feet over the tops of the trees."

Brown said the object was about 30 feet in diameter.

"It was flying from the west, and going slow—I would say about 20 or 30 miles an hour. The noise it made and the smell

"DEFINITELY SAW SOMETHING . . ."

"He definitely saw something peculiar," said Ralph Kidder, animal husbandman at the Everglades Experiment Station, speaking of Brown's encounter with the "flying saucer."

Mr. Kidder said that the horses and cows in the barn seemed "very disturbed" by the odor of the flying object.

"And Sunday morning, when Brown came around with the milk about eight o'clock, he was still jittery," Mr. Kidder said. He added that the cows were still "off" in milk production.

"Furthermore," he said, "the cows used to come up to the barn for milking. Now Brown has to go out in the pasture and round them up and bring them to the barn. The cows stay just as far away from the barn as the fences will allow."

Evacuation Is Unnecessary For Majority Of "Blows" Says Three County Unit

Full Organization Effected To Care For Eventualities Of Hurricanes

With Red Cross Chapters of Polk, Highlands, Okeechobee, Hendry, Glades and Palm Beach Counties participating in a meeting at Clewiston Inn on Monday, Sept. 15, the officials of three railroads, sheriffs, chiefs of police, mayors and just ordinary citizens totalling more than forty, streamlined the organization of the Glades Evacuation Committee for quick and efficient mass evacuation from the Lake Okeechobee area, if ever necessary.

A flat declaration that "using past records and averages, we do not now anticipate the necessity of mass evacuation from around Lake Okeechobee, because substantial public and private buildings are ample to care for those whose homes are not safe during severe hurricanes," was agreed to as the sentiment of the meeting.

Mr. Greene of Moore Haven, former Chapter Chairman, and newly elected member of the Three-county Committee, said "If you folks around on the east and south side will not move in trains, then we won't need any, I am sure; for we can 'take' the hurricanes now with our sub-

FIRST POSTMISTRESS HERE A RECENT VISITOR

"There've been a lot of changes" was the comment of Mrs. R. C. Badger, 85-year-old Glades pioneer, who recently came to Belle Glade for a look around. According to Mrs. Mary Eggleston, who entertained her during her visit, Mrs. Badger looks spry, but seemed "a little surprised" at the growth of the town since she left it about 17 years ago.

Mrs. Badger will be remembered by long-time residents as the first postmistress in this area, with a little office on Rabbit Island in the days when the mail came from Fort Lauderdale once a week.

During her visit here, Mrs. Badger, who now lives in Miami, was accompanied by her two sons and daughters-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Badger of Miami, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Badger of Wenatchee, Washington.

Morale Highest In Military History Says Korean Vet

Bob Beardsley, recently returned from a "hitch" in the air corps with action in Korea, mixed a dry wit with his studied observations about our boys who are seeing service in Korea.

Speaking before the Rotary Club last Friday, Bob said that his service at the front consisted of "adjusting artillery fire," which means hovering over enemy territory and directing artillery fire by radio from a small plane with two observers and nothing more to fight with than a spare bolt or nut.

Bob minimized the dangers of his observing, but questioning brought out the fact that Chinese anti-aircraft boys were pretty good, as well as the ground troops who took a notion to bang away "when you were five hundred to fifteen hundred feet up."

C Of C Protest Adverse Publicity

In protest against unfavorable publicity heaped on the Everglades by a reported remark of David B. Lee, director of the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering, State Board of Health, the Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce this week asked Emmett Roberts to address a letter to Lee asking for a "clarification" of his remarks.

Lee is reported to have said to a meeting of subdivision developers in West Palm Beach on Aug. 29, that for years he had "warned people against moving to the Everglades." The remark, which according to City Engineer John Pickett, Lee himself later labeled "fatuous," was made in connection with a warn-

Car Plunges In Canal At South Bay Bridge

The South Bay one-lane bridge over the North New River Canal on SR 80, which has been the scene of so many accidents that the SRD maintenance crew is kept busy rebuilding guard rails; but to date has had no fatality, lived up to its record Friday morning when four men narrowly escaped death or serious injuries.

The four men, Elijah Brown, Negro driver of the 1949 Ford, John Davis of Pahokee, and two unidentified Negroes were enroute to their work on the Flood Control dike near Fort Lauderdale. The driver, who said he was traveling about 50 miles an hour, threw on his brakes to slow down at the approach of the bridge. The car skidded out of control on the wet pavement, hurtled over the canal bank, missing the bridge altogether, and did a flip over, coming to rest bottom up in the soft mud and shallow water south of the bridge.

The men were able to break out a window and escaped with only minor cuts and bruises. The car, according to Chief of Police R. C. White, was a total wreck.

Davis, one of the passengers, said later that the three Negroes were accustomed to ride with him; but that on this particular morning Brown wished to take his own car. Davis pointed out that on this occasion at least, the narrow one-lane bridge was not the cause of the accident.

The wrecked car was pulled out by Parish Brothers of Belle Glade.

The accident happened shortly after seven o'clock in the morning.

Move At His Own Risk Was Exactly That Last Friday

"Four inches off the beam" was the trouble of housemover A. I. Davis, Pahokee, last Friday, who was somewhat chagrined when wooden timbers on the still unrepaired eastern side of Belle Glade bridge across the Hillsborough Canal, caved in under the load of a white frame house that Davis was transporting to Pahokee.

Davis, who bought the house from S. B. Gurkins, was moving it to Pahokee for re-sale to Dr. L. W. Armstrong. The accident occurred about 11:30 a. m., and for more than a hour, north and southbound traffic was diverted

by John Keigh

SCHOOLS—Literature is now being distributed in support of the No. 1 constitutional amendment proposed for ratification in November. This is the amendment that would freeze for 30 years the school building allotment from the state by earmarking it from motor vehicle tag money.

Now, don't get excited. Let's take a calm look at what this proposed amendment would and at what it would not do.

1. It would not add to what the state now gives the counties for school buildings. That would stay as it is at $400 a unit.

2. It would not force any county to borrow any money for speeding up its school building. Any county could keep to the policy of pay-as-you go. Any county far behind on school buildings could get what it needs now and use the buildings while paying for them.

3. It would enable any county to borrow money at lower interest rates and probably for longer terms than at present at lower expense.

4. It would not tie up all the state school building money behind the revenue certificates, leaving the county nothing for future needs. On the contrary, the county could tie up only 75 percent of its current state school building funds. That would leave 25 percent free for future use plus the increase in school enrollment.

5. It would not require any increase in state taxes and it would not trim in any way any funds now available for any other purpose. The tag money already goes into the pot from which the $400 a unit is now being paid, so nothing but bookkeeping would be affected at all.

Then why, since this amendment does nothing to state taxes or state spending for other purposes, is it necessary and how would it help? The answer is simple. The amendment would be a state guarantee to the purchaser that he would get his money. That would make the revenue certificates as good as a state bond—much better than the average county bond—and therefore a grade A investment for anybody's money. That's why it would bring down the interest rate. Also revenue certificates are easier and cheaper to issue than county bonds.

If ever the pepole had a chance to get something for nothing, this is it. That's not just the opinion of this department. Governor-Nominee Dan McCarty and all the organizations interested in schools have endorsed it. This one is recommended.

DRIVE-IN CHURCH

ber 28. "These Drive-In services," Pastor Ford emphasizes, are in no way to be sensational, but rather, they are to be the regular evening worship service of this church with regular order of worship. The difference is, worshippers will drive in, remain in their cars, and the minister will speak from an outside pulpit through an amplying system. Good sacred music is to be provided.

"The inauguration of these Sunday Evening Drive-In services will climax a great day in the life of the Presbyterian Church of the Everglades. On this date, the Sunday School will hold its annual rally day services in the sanctuary at 9:45 a. m. Morning worship services ta 11:00 a. m., and an old fashioned picnic to follow the morning worship service.

"There are a number of members in this church who have attended Church and Sunday School services regularly, some not having been absent for a period of 5 years. Special recognition will be given those and others; pictures are to be taken of the Sunday School, and certain awards will be given the various classes and individuals for faithful service and atendance.

"Theme for the day's activities will be "The Word of Life." Throughout the entire nation, similar services are to be held in all major denominations and in Canada for the purpose of honoring God's Word which has been spoken to men through the ages, and to mark the introduction this week of The Revised Standard Version of The Holy Bible.

"Every member of the Everglades Presbyterian Church is urged to be present at all services on September 28, bringing a picnic lunch and Rallying around the Church on this date, remembering the Drive-In services to be inaugurated on that evening at 8:00 p. m."

It is also emphasized that every one is invited to all services, whether a member of this church or not: "If you are a member of some other church in the Community, support it that day and every day thereafter, says Pastor Ford.

"The Presbyterian Church extends you a cordial invitation to be with them at all times."

FULL-TIME OFFICER ASSIGNED TO SCHOOL

A full-time police officer to watch traffic in the school zone was requested at a meeting Monday of the PTA Safety Committee, which asked Chief of Police Charles Goodlett to assign such an officers as soon as possible.

According to Goodlett, Carl Williams, recently with the Fire Department, has been appointed to the police force, and will take over the duties of policing the school zone. Alternate to Williams will be Fred Archer.

The Safety Committee also discussed wtih Goodlett the parking rules and regulations governing the school zone, as well as the loading and unloading of school children.

Next Monday morning, Goodlett is scheduled to address an assembly of the children, to caution them about using the left side of the road for walking, and to inform them generally about safety measures being taken for their protection. "Children, parents, and drivers all must cooperate," Goodlett said.

Present at the meeting which was held Monday at 9:30 a. m. in the New High School Building, were Goodlett, school principal F. O. Hobson, PTA president Mrs. E. M. Lively, and the Safety Committee, Mrs. Jack Rashley, Mrs. John Hooker, and Mrs. Alfred Vadasz.

Activities of Glades Scouts

The Palm Beach County Girl Scout Committee conducted this past week at West Palm Beach, a three-day training course for the purpose of making present leaders more proficient in the scouting field and to acquaint new leaders with their responsibilities.

Belle Glade was indeed fortunate in having Mrs. A. B. McCormick, chairman of the local central committee in attendance at this all-important gathering. The knowledge she obtained at the work shop sessions will be passed on to other potential leaders in this district.

On Wednesday, September 10, the program was in charge of Mrs. Roberta Vernon, professional worker of West Palm Beach. She explained the basic beliefs and fundamentals of the Girl Scout program. Her talk served both as a refresher and a starter for all adults working in Scouting.

Thursday was devoted to adults working with Intermediate Girl Scouts, with Mrs. Leslie Nevins of West Palm Beach explaining how to make the best use of the badge program. Mrs. Nevins is considered the outstanding intermediate leader in the Palm Beach area.

The lighter side of scouting activities reigned on Friday when the session was given over to song session and square dancing. The brownie, intermediate and senior leaders as well as troop committee members participated in the singing and dancing program.

Beginning on September 30 courses pertaining to leadership of outdoor activities will be conducted in a week-long session to be held both at the Howard Park Club House, West Palm Beach and Camp Marjorie Daniels at Jupiter. It is hoped by the local central committee more women will be able to join Mrs. McCormick in attendance at these future sessions.

Wolf, who will make a 15-minute talk, will also discuss vegetable varieties and recommended planting dates for this fall season here in the Glades.

McDONALD PLAYS BANGUP GAME FOR DETROIT LIONS

Carroll McDonald, formerly captain of the University of Florida football team and now trying out with the Detroit Lions, professional team, played a "bangup game" for the Lions on Sept. 6, when they met the Cleveland Browns at Archibald Stadium in Syracuse, N. Y. According to Mark Challancin, South Bay, who saw the game, Carroll played the entire game on defense.

Challancin, now in Hamilton, N. Y. with a harvesting crew, went to Syracuse especially for the game, and afterwards in a long-distance telephone conversation with his wife here, said that Carroll did a handsome job.

The former University of Florida student, who will know within the next week or so whether he is retained for the season with the Lions, hopes to attend Wayne University this fall, while earning enough money at football to complete his education next year at the University of Florida. McDonald, who is majoring in physical education, lacks sufficient hours in ROTC for graduation, but hopes with study at Wayne and later on again at U of F, to take his degree next June.

As we get deeper into the ballyhoo of political campaigns, we find both major parties promising peace and prosperity if they are in power, and doom in varying degrees if the opposition wins. However, any candidate will tell you there are two ways of looking at things . . . his way and the wrong way. The best thing you can say about your opponent is that he is "misguided" . . . and the worst you can say is unprintable. Of course, none of us has to believe everything.

TV NEWSREEL

by GEORGE HRUBY

It's surprising how many people aren't getting the full benefit from their television sets because they're not following a few simple tuning rules. Here are a few tips which may help.

A great many viewers use the fine tuner on the station selector control to adjust the volume. Once the picture and sound are clear let the fine tuner alone. Use the volume control for raising and lowering the volume. The same applies to picture brightness which will vary with external light conditions. Don't hesitate to use it but be wary of abusing the contrast control. Set this to obtain a comfortable range of black and whites and use the brightness control to increase or decrease the brilliance of the picture.

The television quiz show, patterned after its radio counterpart, is one of video's big attractions. But did you ever wonder where the word "quiz" came from? Well, you can blame it on the Irish! A Dublin theater operator many years ago made a wager that given any four letters he could create a new word and make it common talk within 24 hours. Given the letters, "Q," "U," "I," and "Z," the fellow simply took a pocketful of chalk and proceeded to walk all over Dublin scrawling the word "quiz" on any available surface.

The wager proved to be a safe one for the very next day every Dublinite was asking "what does 'quiz' mean?" Not only had the theater operator proved he was right but at the same time he had coined a word that was destined to become one of the best-known terms in the U. S. . . On the same basis, we would be willing to wager that many TV viewers are still using obsolete TV sets with small screens. Don't lose out on good entertainment, get a screen to fit the size of the living room. As for the smaller set, keep it for the playroom . . . or junior's bedroom . . . then you can enjoy the program you like . . . and so can the children. Come in and let us advise you on the correct size to get. LAKE SHORE RADIO. 165 Avenue "A." Phone: 2825.

Street Commisioner H. O. Carlton joined Clayton in the first half-hour of his watch, as did Fred Brown, Experiment Station employee who early Sunday morning sighted a mysterious flying object near the Station's barn. Brown, who saw the "flying saucer" just 31 hours in advance of "operation Skywatch" has been made honorary air-raid spotter here.

Other spotters who took part in the practice were Lester Clarke, and W. R. McClatchey, Elks Club; Jim Welrengo, and Emmett Roberts, Lions Club; and Rev. G. E. Tenson and James Powe, Negro Civic Group.

Clayton, who took the first watch, was soon joined by Carlton and Brown. The Herald photographer (male) and reporter (female) also climbed up the ladder and over the wall to cover the opening half-hour of the watch, which got under way when the hum of motors announced a twin-engine airplane flying high. Clayton raced for the telephone, got through to the Filter Center in Miami, and made the first report from Belle Glade Observation Post.

But when the second plane flew over, the telephone line was dead; and spotters expressed themselves dramatically on the subject. Reviving shortly in time for a local call, the instrument again suspired when two fast high-flying planes flew directly over the roof, and spotters again had something to say.

When the out-of-order telephone was reported, a telephone crew rushed to the scene to make necessary repairs. Clayton reports that during the whole watch, numerous two and four-engine planes were sighted, as well as one lot of jets.

The police department cooperated with the spotters in readying the makeshift observation post for business.

The jail, Clayton emphasizes, will serve only until a real observation tower, planned for inclusion in the Fire Department addition, is complete.

Pearce also reports that "A committee of ladies is preparing a busy schedule of entertainment and recreation for the ladies. It is emphasized that ladies are invited and urged to attend our convention."

According to the agenda, baby sitters, if necessary, can be secured by the hotel. In addition, "By no means has entertainment been overlooked. A committee has planned several lively events, with a surprise or two in store."

LIONS HEAR REPORT ON AMENDMENT NO. 1

"It will make no change. It simply guarantees what is already being done."

Speaking in support of constitutional amendment No. 1, proposed for ratification in November, George Slaton, chairman of the Palm Beach County Board of Public Instruction, told a Lions Club luncheon meeting Wednesday at the Bend that the amendment would earmark money from motor vehicle tags for school buildings and busses.

"This, in fact, is what is being done," he said. "The present system has been in effect since 1947; amendment No. 1 simply guarantees to continue the system for the next 30 years."

Pointing out that 2,000 more pupils are enrolled in Palm Beach County schools this year, Slaton emphasized the shortage of buildings and school equipment. Statewide, $3,000,000 is needed to provide necessary buildings.

ing to subdivision developers that in future, the SBH will not approve any building projects where there is "the shadow of a doubt" about the proper functioning of septic tanks.

Since SBH approval is needed on building projects to be financed by Federal insurance agencies, Lee's decision spelled the end of FHA and Veterans' Administration loans in most of the Glades area.

The Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors meeting here on Tuesday night, also discussed the Florida Power & Light Company franchise, which expires in 1956; decided to give a boost to the Glades Rice Co-op; directed Mrs. George C. Young, chamber secretary, to write a letter to the US Health Department asking for latest information about sodium fluoride in drinking water as an anti-dental caries measure; talked about sending a committee to the State Road Department meeting in Miami, Oct. 3, to urge immediate letting of the contracts on four Glades one-way bridges; and heard an announcement by Henry O. Earwood, president of the US Highway 441 Association, that the directors of the association will hold their annual meeting at Mount Dora on Sept. 27.

Chamber of Commerce directors present at the Tuesday evening session were Junius Harris, vice-president, and E. M. Lively, Ivan Van Horn, Emmett Roberts, Henry Earwood, R. E. Hotard, and W. A. Wooten, Jr. Mrs. George Young, secretary, reported the meeting.

WHAT IS IT?

it gave off scared the animals into a stampede. There were several horses in the barn, and they and the cows lit out, running across the field."

Brown confessed that he was more than a little jittery himself. "I watched the thing fly over Dr. Kidder's house," he said, "and I ran to try to rouse somebody; but I couldn't get anybody awake."

"Then nobody else saw the object?" the Air Force officer asked.

"No," Brown said. "Usually there's two others working with me, but they came on the job at the regular time, five o'clock. But there were two cars on the Palm Beach Road, and they must have seen it, because they nearly wrecked, stopping."

"What time was this?"

Brown said slowly, "It was about twenty minutes to five, I'd say the first time it came over. Then it came back — a second time. I'd barely rounded up the cows again and calmed them down a little, when the thing came back, this time from the south. It was flying higher and faster this time. And the cows stampeded again, running off in all directions. Both times, there was an odor that stung my nose and mouth and burned my eyes; and both times, that low hum."

"What was the odor like?" the Air Force interrogator said.

"Kinda like an acid smell, or the smell of ammonia," Brown said. He added that it was "very strong."

"Tell us what it looked like."

"Well," Brown said, "It looked to be circular, with the top . . ." he made an elliptical motion with his hand, ". . . . sorta like this. It seemed to be about eight-feet deep, and it had lights around the bottom of it, about a foot apart; every other light was red, and amber."

"One amber light, then one red light?"

"That's right, and about afoot apart."

"Would you say the lights were portholes, or were they spotlights?"

"I don't really know. They looked to be spotlights."

Brown said that the second appearance of the "object" must have been about five minutes past five o'clock.

He also said that the cows, who afterwards yielded about six gallons less milk than usual are still not back to normal in their milk production.

The 42-year-old dairyman has worked at the Experiment Station since the end of June. Previously, he was in charge of the dairy at the Glades State Prison farm. Married six years, the Browns and their three children have lived in Belle Glade a year, coming here from Tampa, where Brown was employed for several years with the Florida Renderers Company.

A native of Newcastle, Indiana, Brown worked on the Chicago Northwestern Railroad for almost six years. "Before that," he says, "I was in the army."

His blue-eyed wife, Lois, was born in New Brocton, Alabama.

They Won't Say

The two young Air Force representatives, who said they must remain anonymous, were careful not to voice any opinions about Brown's story. Noting the details in a little red book, one of them said with a smile, "It's our business to ask questions, not answer them. And we peons aren't supposed to have opinions anyway."

Then they rode back to West Palm Beach with the information in their pockets.

GLADES STUDENTS

in Gainesville will have enough local boys and girls on its campus to organize a Belle Glade club, what with Billy Burke, Ross Winne, Clara and Fritz Stein, Jr., Bill Mizelle, Wilfred Markham, Freddie and Albert Stevens, Jimmy Herring, Bill Bailey, Jr., Billy Ray Evans, Buddy Friedheim, and Robert Taylor on hand.

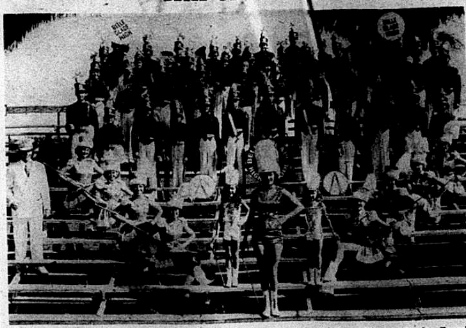

At Stetson will be Patsy Chamblee, a major in education, Betty Layfield, whose field is secretarial science, and Bonnie Williams a first year student.

Marianne and Clark Womack, Johnny Robinson, Kenneth Lutz, Jackie Royals, and Donna Norris will claim Florida Southern as home for the coming year.

Alvin Leathers at Tampa, Catherine Friedheim at Barry down in Miami and Florence Boree at Palm Beach Junior College complete the picture for colleges within the state.

Journeying to Atlanta as a graduate student in religious education at Emory is Mary Eleanor Kidder, while Austin Holladay will be a senior in the Candler School of Theology at the same institute. Bobby Hooker and Howard Hill, Jr. are at Auburn, John Bregger and John S. Parke both of whom are studying under the N.R.O.T.C. program claim the same school as home port. And it looks as if Jerry Burry will be the greatest distance away from home, as he has selected Northwestern in the windy city of Chicago for further study.

OUTDOOR FLORIDA

By Herb Mosher

(A cruise down the Indian River to Fort Pierce and Stuart, thence up the St. Lucie and across Lake Okeechobee to the West Coast, then up the West Coast . . . is described in today's guest column, written by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sias, yachting enthusiasts, of Winter Park, who just recently completed the trip. Mr. Sias, one of the American Machinery Corp's executives, is well known at Fort Pierce, Belle Glade, Orlando, and throughout the State, since his company is a leading manufacturer of citrus-and-vegetable machinery.)

FRESH-WATER DRUM
Aplodinotus grunniens

We launched the "Honey Chile" at Correct Craft in Titusville at 8 p. m., Friday, August 1st. We had intended to launch her at Cocoa just beyond the bridge at 4 p. m. Everybody told us there was nothing to it—bigger boats than our 17 ft. Cris Craft were launched there all the time. Maybe they are. But we would sure like to know where. We waded every foot of that causeway. Lovely hard sandy bottom, but not enough water to launch a rowboat. Eventually someone offered that perhaps the season was wrong, and there just wasn't enough water. Wonder why we always do things out of season!

The terrific downpour that had almost launched us in Colonialtown in Orlando had rained itself out and a magnificent evening had developed. As we nosed away from the dock we were suddenly aware of the most spectacular display of phosphorescence we had ever beheld! Literally hundreds of fish were darting about leaving flashing streamers and curious spirals of bright green fire. The wake of our boat was dancing far behind, brilliantly alive. Pulsating jellyfish glowed greenly on all sides. That night on the Indian River the "Honey Chile" soared on fairy fire.

At this point we should mention that the "Honey Chile" has a canvas top, an arrangement of support for inflatable mattresses, several cans of sterno, and an icebox. We live on her in considerable comfort.

We dropped anchor at the first beacon south of Cocoa, and had a calm cool night. No mosquitoes. Up at 5:30 a. m., for a colorful sunrise, and soon underway. We fished for a short while at the junction of the Banana and Indian Rivers, but were impatient to travel, so on we hurried to Fort Pierce. Captain Fagan at the Baywood Smoked Fisheries was most helpful. He told us where to fish, and even gave us some mullet gizzards to catch some of his pet catfish for bait. (We were hoping for a nice fat jewfish). Unfortunately our live well was not functioning properly, and by the time we had taken on ice and gas our live catfish were no longer live bait. At this point the skies opened again and a persistent rain set in. Fishing at night is all right, but fishing at night in the rain with dead bait when its supposed to be alive is not my idea of the way to spend a pleasant evening. We soon decided we'd be much better off asleep, and anchored behind Beacon 245. It turned to to be a bad night. A tidal basin is no place for a calm anchorage, especially with a good breeze cutting across the tides. We were really rocked in the cradle of the deep (at least five feet of water).

Next morning was Sunday and we had a very pleasant run down to St. Lucie. We poked our nose out the inlet into the big Atlantic, but the wind had stirred it up a little too much for the "Honey Chile" so we quickly ran inside. Folks had told us we could troll for snook in the inlet. So we did! No snook!

At noon we docked at Stuart for gas (no ice) and cruised up the canal. The tarpon were rolling near the lock and we tried to entice them with a great variety of baits. But they were not enticed, so we went through the lock at 3:40. The fourteen foot lift was accomplished with ease and we cruised along just as another skyopener appeared. We had previously painted some of the panels of our canvas top with paraffin melted in gasoline, and that was our mistake. We should have painted them all. The painted ones did not leak!!! But the sun soon dried us up and we arrived at Port Mayaca in time to see a crimson sunset. We dropped anchor just inside the bridge. A calm anchorage with an abundance of musical mosquitoes which bothered us not a whit since we had mosquito netting. (Before we left home our seven-year-old watched me sewing on it and asked what it was. When I answered "mosquito netting" she logically asked "why do you want to catch mosquitos?")

Monday morning up before dawn for our cruise across big Lake Okeechobee. "Calm as a lake" was that huge body of water. We took on provisions, gas, and ice at Canal Point and set out across the lake. No land or markers visible ahead. Only our trusty compass (which always pointed south until we turned it around and now it always points north) and of course, our invaluable charts. Our crossing was uneventful but enjoyable—plenty of blue sky and blue water. We left Ortona Lock at 2:20 and again came terrific rainstorm. This time even the engine objected to being wet and we stopped to pump her dry. The mate threw the anchor overboard and then discovered it was not attached to the rope. Alas The lockman at Ortona had needed a rope and we had unfastened our anchor from the bow line—afterwards in the excitement of dodging a big dredging machine on the other side of the lock the anchor line was forgotten. Lost—one anchor! The rain soon stopped and then began the most beautiful part of our cruise. The Caloosahatchee River is wide and winding, lined on both sides and with magnificent trees. Florida at her sub-tropical best. Reached Fort Myers at sunset and tied up at the yacht for a good night's rest.

Then on to Captive Pass. We anchored near shore and went on the beach with our minnow net to catch some bait. But the tide was rushing out too fast. In despair I caught three small crabs simply by grabbing them and pretending they were not pinching. So we started fishing for tarpon with our small crabs. The captain went on deck to bring in the minnow net and slipped into the outrushing tide. The mate barely got a hand out in time Safe, one captain! Lost, one minnow ~~net.~~ (It was supposed to float but the tide was whirling so that it disappeared from our sight). The beautiful full moon came out and the evening was so beautiful. Of course we didn't catch anything, but what a night to be out! At midnight to tried to "up anchor," but the anchor wouldn't "up."

GAG
Mycteroperca microlepis (Goode & Bean)

Lost, one anchor. (Anyone would think we had never been in a boat before).

Wednesday—up early — our big day! I felt it when the sun came up! On to Boca Grande, Gas, ice, new anchor, some live mutton minnows, and we went out in the pass. By now we had some more information and we drifted with the tide while fishing at 42 feet. The tarpon were leaping about us, and the boat alongside brought in four beauties. But not the "Honey Chile!" This was not our tarpon trip. Instead we began catching beautiful fifteen pound groupers and jack cravalles, and the fishing trip was immediately a fishing trip. We stopped when the tide began rushing, and cruised up the Boca Grande Canal. All at once we found a little road that went right to the Gulf, so we borrowed a dock and walked over for a wonderful swim. Fresh fish for dinner at last. And delicious! Back to the pass for some moonlight fishing—but no luck this time, Just a heavenly night! We tied up at the Coast Guard dock and slept wtih a luscious cool breeze.

Thursday—up at dawn, and soon underway for our trip "outside" in the Gulf. We went out Little Gasparilla Pass and proceeded north to Venice, about 1 mile. The Gulf was fairly calm, and a beautiful blue green. Cloudless skies. We scooted into Stump Pass for another try at the elusive snook, and another swim. No snook, so on we sailed up the coast. From Venice we followed the inland waterway to Sarasota, a pretty trip, but hot. We missed our drenching, cooling rains. Soon we arrived in Sarasota, where we were joined by another fishing couple. We deserted the faithful "Honey Chile" for an apartment on the bay, taking day trips in the vicinity, and fishing, fishing, fishing!

The "Honey Chile" came back to Winter Park on her trailer having carried us on a long-to-be remembered cruise.

Total catch of trip—25 fish. Not bad! And we still have our tarpon trip to look forward to!

The Gardener's Corner

FLOWERING TREES

Mrs. Luther Jones

It is a pleasant challenge to drive over tropical Florida and note the exotic flowering trees of so many different species growing and showing off their brilliant blooms in the summertime, here. It is challenging in the manner of being tempted to try out one after another in our black rich soil to see if it will not grow them just a little larger with more brilliant flowers!

Royal Poinciana

The most popular tree of all, I think, must be the brilliant Royal Poinciana, or Flame Tree. When one is in full blom, it appears almost unreal. It is a native of Madagascar.

The Royal Poinciana is easily grown from seed, and will bloom the third year, spreading out farther and blooming more densely each year thereafter. That is, of course, if no hurricane breaks its limbs. These are very brittle and break easily. The seed should be planted in a damp shady place, then transplanted to jars or cans until a good root system is established. Do not set them too close to your home, as they may fall on the house during a hurricane.

The trees may be grown very tall, sometimes to 40 or 50 feet in height. Or, they may be topped, encouraging the limbs to spread like an umbrella.

After they are established, the trees do not require very much care. In order to prevent termites or other borers, all dead and broken branches should be removed and the scars painted with insecticide, or tree paint.

Orchid Tree

The orchid tree, sometimes called mountain ebony, or ox's hoof, is grown easily in our soil here, and has proved to be a much loved addition to local gardens. There are several types, and colors. Some bloom in early spring, others in November.

The Bauhinia (botanical) will thrive in full sun and semi-shade. Full sunlight brings out the loveliness of their delicate blossoms. The tree not only has beautiful blossoms, but its leaves are unusual. They are divided into twin sections, suggesting the print of an ox's hoof.

There is one Bauhinia that grows only four feet high. It looks like a mound of graceful spreading branches, with flamingo colored blooms that resemble the nasturtium. This Bauhinia has blooms on its branches practically the year round.

The trees will stand drouth and floding. However, they will break in a strong hurricane wind if allowed to grow top-heavy. They may be lightly pruned after the blooming period.

Bottle-Brush Tree

This tree, which grows sometimes 30 feet high, makes a beautiful specimen plant and is attractive silhouetted again a wall. Its branches are drooping and graceful, like those of the weeping willow. On the ends of the branches are red, bristle-like blooms shaped like a bottle brush.

The tree, grown here, is rarely without some blossoms, but blooms quite profusely in the spring. It is one of the most graceful sights, with the red 'bottle-brushes' swaying in the breezes. The leaves are of a fern-like quality and accentuate its gracefulness.

The tree may be propagated by air-layering, or by seeds. The high wind does not have any ill effect on its willowy branches; neither do floods and drouth.

Jerusalem Thorn

This tree, better known here as the Parkinsonia, is another graceful, fern-like tree, with a drooping habit of growth. The foliage is so fine that the dark branches may be readily traced.

Blossoms of golden yellow may be found on the tree any time of the year, but it is a vertiable bower of spring loveliness in April and May. The yellow petals fall on the ground beneath, keeping their color for days, adding a beauty of their own. The blossoming tree during rainy weather simply exudes springtime!

Plants are easily grown from seeds. They may be first planted in cans until a good root system is established, then placed in permanent sites. For safety's sake, the lower branches should always be kept cut back to the trunk, for the thorns can cause pain to the unwary.

The tree, once established, is almost indestructible.

EAST LAKE SCHOOL NEWS

Pahokee

Back to school!

At the three weeks' pre-school conference during August, local teachers made plans for the approaching school season.

Now, teachers report, students are back again, full of enthusiasm, ready to begin the 1952-53 term. An increase in enrollment is reported, with present pupils totaling 172, and more pupils expected before the end of the month.

Clark, who has been our music instructor for two years. Miss Clark resigned to accept a position directly in her field of work.

"In the meanwhile, a new teacher has been added to the faculty, Mrs. Iona Fitzgerald of Belle Glade, who has accepted an assignment as fourth grade teacher. Mrs. Fitzgerald has previously served as a substitute teacher in our school several times.

"We are looking forward to an interesting and profitable experience, working cooperatively together throughout the year."

MOVE AT HIS OWN

to Chosen bridge, while police attended the scene, Street Commissioner H. O. Carlton appeared, and numerous onlookers turned up to gaze and comment. Happened this way.

For this past several weeks, State Road Department crews have been working on the bridge, removing the old wooden deck and replacing it with a new steel floor. Starting on the western half, workmen roped it off, diverted traffic over the eastern lane in one slow stream at a time. Several goodly snarls resulted from the non-synchronization of traffic signals, and policemen rushed out every now and then to do the unsnarling; but nothing serious occurred until last Friday, when, western side of the bridge completed, SRD crews roped off the eastern half, started on the job of wrecking that side, while traffic flowed over the newly finished steel floor on the west.

At 11:30 a. m. housemover Davis approached, driving a White truck, with a lowboy trailer attached. On the lowboy was the white frame house, dimensions 23 by 30 feet. Davis had a permit from the SRD, Fort Lauderdale, to move the house across the bridge. Dubious SRD working crews looked at the permit, loked at the bridge, said, 'Move it at your own risk."

Davis started across, four of the eight rear wheels of the trailer riding on the newly completed steel floor, and the four right rear wheels moving on the wooden timbers, which proceeded to cave in under the load.

Davis said that the center right rear wheels were "four inches off the bridge beam," and that the timber ends were too weak to support the load.

Six of Davis's employees who were following him in a truck, rushed to get a jack. Meanwhile, house sat lopsidedly on the bridge, completely blocking it. Chief of Police Charles Goodlett and Officers J. B. Whitehurst, Fred Archer, and Sgt. V. R. Clark directed traffic to Chosen bridge, which hadn't done so much business in years.

Finally, the jack arrived, was thrust under the lowboy, which slowly was raised until a timber could be shoved under the two stuck wheels, and the truck, lowboy, and house atop it, rolled slowly off the bridge and on to Pahokee about 12:45 p. m.

But it's an ill wind blows no good. Chosen residents are thankful that weeds obscuring the corner views of their bridge, were finally cut down last Friday.

Meanwhile at Belle Glade, all is back to normal abnormal, with traffic using the western half of the briuge until the whole thing is finished, which —SRD men say—could be in the next week.

MORALE HIGHEST IN

"Ability to get along with other United Nations fighting teams and the unusually high morale of the average soldier are outstanding with the American soldier 'checking 'em off'," in Korea, says Bob. "It is easy to spot the newcomer by his anxiety to hear the newscasts by radio," the returned airman said. This remark was in answer to a question as to how the boys regard the highly publicized peace talks, with the addition, "They pay no attention at all."

"Everyone is happy, comparatively, and joins enthusiastically and unanimously in cussin Washington," he says.

Pointing out that in World War II, out of each thousand soldiers wounded;, 40 died, and that in Korea, five out of each thousand are fatalities, Beardsley heaped high praise on the medical and hospital facilities given the boys. Also, equipment is of sufficient quantity and quality; there is no scarcity of ammunition.

"The boys know that when they have accumulated the necessary points for rotation they will be rotated—sent home — and they also know that when their time comes for "five days in Tokyo" they'll be flown there and be able to forget war. "Five days in Tokyo, and you're ready to go back to fighting," Bob says.

"The Chinese come over in three waves," he says; "the first with rapid fire rifles and machine guns, the second with rifles and bayonets, and the third with absolutely nothing, depending on grabbing the rifle of some comrade killed in front of him. They come in droves and are reckless; there's nothing to do but cut 'em down."

A most interesting tale and told with modesty, keen sense of observation, and evaluation of action, purposes and results—you'll do well to go far to listen to Bob talk of his experiences, if you have the opportunity.

GIVE IT BACK TO THEM . . .?

Florida's Indians are definitely NOT in the "vanishing American" category, having scored nearly a 50 percent population gain during the 10-year Federal census period ending in 1950.

J. Nixon Hadley, chief statistician for the Federal Bureau of Indian Affairs branch of health, has notified Florida's State Health Officer Wilson T. Sowder that the state's Indian population has climbed from 690 counted during the 1940 census to 1,011 listed in 1950.

More than half the state's Indian population is located in four counties in the Southern part of the peninsula, Nixon informed Dr. Sowder. The counties include Broward, 147; Collie, 175, Glades, 134, and Hendry, 125; a total of 581. The remaining 430 were scattered throughout the state at the time the census was compiled.

The Seninole is the predominant Indian tribe in Florida, but how many of the present populatiton is Seminole and how many are other tribes "is not determinable" from census records, Hadley stated.

Most of Florida's Seminoles are descendants of refugees who fled to the sanctuary of the Everglades in South Florida following a disastrous seven-year war with United States Forces which ended in 1842.

Thousands of Indians lost their lives in the long campaign which cost an estimated ten million dollars. Most of the survivors were rounded up and transferred to the new Indian Tterritory west of the Mississippi River.

Other Florida Counties with significant Indian populations include Dade, 88; Bay, 20; Brevard, 13; Charlotte, 10; Duval, 14; Escambia, 31; Gilchrist, 9; Hillsborough, 27; Jackson, 8; Palm Beach, 10; Orange, 11; Polk, 20; St. Johns, 24; St. Lucie, 51; Volusia, 11.
Volusia, 11.

Florida's Seminoles were originally Creek Indians who separated from the Creek Confederacy and overran Florida after the destruction of the Apalachee and Tumicua tribes by the English in 1702-03.

Their warlike qualities got them in trouble twice with the United States. In 1817-18, a U. S. force under the leadership of General Andrew Jackson invaded the then Spanish-held state to curb their border raids into Georgia.

By a treaty signed in 1832 they pledged themselves to move to the new Indian Territory in the West. They repudiated that treaty and touched off the seven year war in 1835.

Of special interest to historians is that the United States still is technically at war with the Seminole Indians. A peace treaty has never been signed wtih the Red Men who fled to the sanctuary of the swamps.

Florida has three Indian reservations in the state; Big Cypress in Hendry County and Brighton in Glades County, both near Clewiston, and Dania, in Broward County near Dania. K. A. Marmon of the Federal Indian Agency is superintendent. Miss H. Louisa Harple of the U. S. Public Health Service, is public health nurse for the three reservations.

But while Florida's Seminole Indians still have largely maintained their traditional aloofness from the white man's ways, they are beginning to show a more friendly interest in the power of the white man's medicine, if a recent health test staged by the Florida State Board of Health is any reliable indication. More than 95 percent of the Indians on the three reservations old enough to take the test showed up for examinations. Of the 281 tested, only one showed evidence of syphilis, four showed evidence of diabetes, while 42 had indications of nutritional deficiency, as shown by blood tests.

CROP OUTLOOK IS GOOD: EFFICIENCY, PLANNING REQUIRED FOR SUCCESS

By Spuds Johnson

The prediction of the Florida Agricultural Outlook Committee that the demand for Florida crops in 1952-53 will be somewhat stronger than it was in 1951-52 is encouraging to farmers. It also is of timely significance to farmers who are putting in fall crops and who have been seeking information that would help them in their decisions on acreage.

The committee, however, does not recommend any marked increases in production of most crops, and, with some crops such as tomatoes, recommends slight decreases from last season's production. While the group feels that farmers should enjoy slightly stronger demands for most crops in 1952-53, it also thinks that all farmers will do well to consider the prospects for each crop and plant accordingly. Labor, which is almost certain to be short in the new season, is a very important factor, and every farmer should give careful consideration to it in his crop plans.

Reasons for the committee's prediction of somewhat stronger demand for Florida crops in 1952-53 are the increasing rate of spending for defense and new industrial facilities, increasing population of the country and the state (Florida rate now double the national rate), and increasing wage rates and employment.

Population increases, the committee points out, mean more consumers for Florida crops, while increasing wage rates and employment will provide consumers with as much or more money to buy crops from the Sunshine State. Florida demand for such deficit crops as eggs, poultry, and milk is expected to continue strong.

Farming will require all the ingenuity, ability, and efficiency at the farmer's command if he is to make as much or a little more from his crops in 1952-53, however. His share of the consumer's dollar probably will be a little smaller and some of his costs will be higher, but he may equal or exceed his returns of 1951-52 by careful planning, efficiency, and by selling more of his crops.

The outlook committee thinks that 1952-53 will be a slightly better year for Florida farmers than 1951-52, but it also emphasizes that good, careful, efficient farming will be necessary for success. Wise farmers will learn as much as possible about the outlook for their chops and then follow the most efficient program they can devise.

GAME COMMISSION ASKS ADMISSION TAX ON WILD LIFE EXHIBITS

The State Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission will seek authority from the 1953 legislature for an expansion program that would be financed by 10 percent admission tax on glassbottom boat cruises and other exhibits of wild life, says Director Ben McLaughlin.

Other points in the department's 1953 legislative program include: authority to control fishing gear used in fresh waters, heavier penalties for violators of certain game and fish laws, and a $1.50 short-term fishing license for visitors .

McLaughlin estimated the proposed tax on wild life exhibit admissions would bring the commission a million dollars a year from concerns such as Silver Springs, Wakulla Springs, Ross Allen's Reptile Institute and others. Proceeds would be used for acquiring more public hunting and fishing grounds, eradicating water hyacinths and adding 85 wild life officers to the present staff of 134.

McLaughlin said the admission tax would probably be passed on to the person buying the ticket.

EVACUATION

stantial buildings. Mayor Friend of Pahokee, Mayor Collins of Belle Glade, Ted Daniels of Lake Harbor and others concurred in the sentiment.

Another basic agreement reached by the Committee and the Red Cross authorities is that home rule will prevail. It appears in the provision that the Evacuation Committee will make the final decision as to whether or not evacuation is recommended by a poll of the Committee members, who in turn will abide by the decision of the local Disaster Committee of which each is a member.

The railroads—FEC, SAL and ACL — were represented and readily agreed to abide by the decision of the Evacuation Committee, which will clear thru the Palm Beach County Chapter to the railroads for "stand-by" instructions, as well as if and when trains will be moved to Glades points.

The railroads were complimented and thanked by the Chairman for their participation in the past in so unselfish a manner. The general understanding was reached that railroads will be reimbursed for actual cost of their participation, by American Red Cross.

Okeechobee, Sebring and Highlands County, and Lakeland with Polk County were present as potential hosts to the evacuees of the Lake Okeechobee area, with the announcement of plans to provide shelter and emergency food.

The cooperation of these neighbors in the past was warmly appreciated by the Committee, and gratitude for offered help in the future.

Cooperation of the Zone Chairman of Disaster for the American Red Cross, Mr. Russell, of Atlanta, was assured by his personal appearance and participation in the plan-making. His good offices will be invoked in whatever capacity needed and especially in making provisions for army field kitchens for the use of groups of evacuees.

Col. John Abbe, Palm Beach County Chapter Chairman, was accompanied to the meeting by Mel Livengood, that Chapter's Secretary.

Okeechobee County was represented by H. H. Raulerson, Chapter Chairman and Bruce McDougal, Disaster Chairman.

Mrs. Jesse W. Atkins, Chairman of the Glades County Chapter was accompanied by Frank Greene, former Chairman.

Col. Lewis S. Webster, Disaster Chairman of Lakeland, was accompanied by the Lakeland Chief of Police.

Lewis Friend, Mayor and Frank Roselle, Chairman were there from Pahokee.

Clewiston was represented by Tom Jones, Jr., as Chairman of the Chapter; R. R. Hooks, Disaster Chairman and by Sidney Crochet, who was named to the Evacuation Committee to replace Pat Patterson.

Ted Daniels represented Lake Harbor, as a member of the overall Evacuation Committee.

George Burr, Mayor of Winter Haven, and a friend of the Glades, along with Sheriff Hagan Parrish of Polk, and Powell Ott, Disaster Chairman at Winter Haven, wired to be counted in and requested minutes of the meeting.

Belle Glade was represented by Frank Dooley and R. E. Hotard, as members of the Evacuation Committee, with Luther Jones as Chairman.

Those attending expressed satisfaction with the meeting and what it accomplished.

Committee Members

Glades Evacuation Committee members are Luther Jones, Chairman; Frank Dooley, and William Young, all of Belle Glade; Frank Rozelle, Pahokee; Paul Rardin, Canal Point; W. C. Allen, South Bay; Ted Daniels, Lake Harbor; Sidney Crochet, Clewiston; and L. E. Hamilton, Florida East Coast Railway, Belle Glade.

MORE MYSTERIES MORE MYSTERIES

By Mary Winne

"You never have a thing but you despise it; you never lose it but you want it back." So Lady Melbourne summed up Lord Byron. But this element of Byron's character is present, though usually less pronounced, in all of us. Lady Melbourne wasn't talking about the right to vote, but the remark applies. . .

We Americans are fond of pointing to "our way of life," and "our democratic institutions." Not long ago, I was surprised to see that a group of Congressmen thought they should start teaching the American way of life to some of the American Indians who, the Congressmen thought, were "ready for it."

Well, we Americans are great on yelling about the right of franchise, or the voting privilege, and short of delivery.

Some of them like to yell about European "totalitarian" states where, they say, a limited minority "runs the country."

Right here in Belle Glade, a limited minority runs the town. Whose fault is it? The population of this town has been estimated at more than 10,000. There are fewer than a thousand kids registered in school. Don't know how many babies there are, or children of pre-school age. Don't know how many adults there are who wouldn't be entitled to vote. But we do know that 1,251 registered voters is a poor showing for Belle Glade. And not even all of those turned up at the polls. Six hundred and eighty-seven came to the polls; 670 valid ballots were counted. If that isn't government by the minority, what is? And whose fault is it?

Maybe this voting apathy also explains why it is that whenever the average American citizen waxes irate about any government action, he never screams, "I'm a voter!" He always screams, "I'm a taxpayer!"

Guess they all pay taxes and don't vote.

The children are always waiting until they come into "man's estate," then when they get there, they don't know what to do with it.

Now let's lok at some of the European countries. Since the war, particularly, European people seem to value the franchise more than we do here—perhaps because, since they lost their freedom during the enemy occupation — they appreciate it now that they have it again.

Now we'll throw in a few statistics. (This country is great on statistics). In our last Presidential election only 54 of every 100 eligible voters cast ballots. Yet in a recent Italian election, 94 out of every 100 voted. A Dutch election drew 89 percent, and in Great Britain, 83 percent voted. Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and France each held elections in which 78 percent or more of the eligible voters cast ballots.

So let's get busy here.

The registrations books are open now at the Chamber of Commerce. They will be open during regular office hours until October 4. Let's all go down and register to vote in the Nov. 4 general election.

We include ourselves in this too. Not long ago we heard about a certain editorial writer who spent a great deal of time exhorting the citizens to vote; castigated those who didn't vote; denounced apathy, lethargy, indifference. Finally turned up himself at the polls on voting day, and the election board told him he hadn't registered.
